Dear [NAME]

February is often thought of as the month of love with the celebration of Valentine's Day. The fact that we have set aside a whole day to honor and celebrate love shows us the magnificent importance that love plays in our life. Valentines Day does not have to be just the celebration between lovers or partners. It can be about the love you have with your child, parent, sibling, friend, self and universe. The healing power of love can be found in many different avenues.

There is nothing more fulfilling and satisfying in life than the act of loving and being loved.

It is the most profound experience we can have. Love is essential for our mental and physical well-being. It is essential for our survival. Love is more than just a feeling, it is a whole body experience and it has a physiological effect on the body.

Loving and being loved actually improves our level of health. Start your day by focusing on how much God loves you and how much of a difference that can make in your life!

Have you ever noticed how much better you feel physically and how your mood improves when you receive a hug or affection from someone who loves you or when you have expressed your love to someone or participate in an act of love?

Tips to Cultivate Love in Your Life on Valentine's Day and Every Day

If you are without partner give yourself all those things you would receive from them. Give yourself a hug, praise, and affection. Take yourself on a date. Buy yourself something special. Make love with yourself. Have a love affair with nature.

If you are with partner, tell them how much you love them, value them, and appreciate them.

Express your feelings. Tell others how you love them and what they mean in your life.

Hug your children; tell them you love them as often as possible. Read them a story. Savor your precious moments with them.

Nurture a connection with nature. Touch, smell, and feel the trees, the wind, a rock. Appreciate the magnificent beauty it presents to you every day.
